

Contributors

MITCH ACKERMAN - received an M.A. from the University of Maryland in Radio/TV/Film - founding member and president of Video Connexions in Buffalo and has held video workshops for children in Columbia, Md. - now in the process of looking for work.

CHUCK ANDERSON - teaches high school in Long Island, N.Y. and author of The Electric Journalist (Praeger, 1973) - adjunct faculty of the Center for Understanding Media - conducted video workshops at the New School for Social Research, Hofstra University, Stony Brook University and the National Conference on Visual Literacy - latest new book called, Video Power: Grassroots TV, will be published by Praeger in 1974.

BOB BEHR - teaches English at the Mill Creek School in Philadelphia where he works with adolescents in the psychiatric division of the Institute of the Pennsylvania Hospital.

QUINCY BENT - teacher for the past five years - responsible for co-producing the pilot program for ZOOM at WGBH in Boston - former Assistant Director of the Children's Video Museum - Director of the New England Communication Center for Developmental Disabilities in Waltham, Mass.

JEFF BUSH - graduate assistant for video programs in the Thematic Studies Department of John Jay College, in New York - currently working on a series of studies on the interaction between dance and video.

BRUCE COST - began working with kids when he received a social service grant from his employer, The Xerox Corporation - currently the Media Coordinator of a program in video, film, photography and journalism at Holy Cross School in Rhinebeck, New York.

MAGGI COWLAN - a member of the staff of the Center for Understanding Media where she works on various projects.

WALTER DALE - working in Fairfield, Maine with his own production group - former director of the Port Washington, N.Y. Public Library Video Program - consultant for over 300 video organizations - currently developing a Maine Video Access Coalition.

JON DUNN - director of the Communications Experience in Philadelphia - director of the related Arts Institute of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania - Associate Professor of Film Arts at Moravia College - served as artist-in-residence in Alaska through the Center for Understanding Media.

DAN EDELMAN - video technician for the Center for Understanding Media - responsible for cover photography and printing of photographs in this issue.

IRVING FALK - most recent book, The War of Ideas (with George Gordon) - a radio and television writer for many years - executive producer/director of the award winning radio programs The Urban League Presents and By the Year 2000 - professor of Communications in the School of the Arts at New York University.

JANE GARMY - project coordinator for the Thematic Studies Program at John Jay College in New York - coordinates and directs all field work and off-campus placements.

LARRY GOLDIN - formerly teacher and counselor in vocational rehabilitational programs in Alaska - discovered by Jon Dunn of the Communications Experience and kidnapped to Philadelphia, where he has been teaching film and video to kids in the inner city - again looking for work in Alaska.

GEORGE GORDON - author of numerous books on persuasion and communications, most notably, Persuasion: The Theory and Practice of Manipulative Communications (Hastings House, 1971) - consultant to various government and private intercultural agencies, both in the United States and in Europe - presently, Chairman of the Department of Communications at Hofstra University in New York - most recent book: The War of Ideas (with Irving Falk).

MYLES HALSBAND - program producer with Warner Cable in eastern Massachusetts - has taught on all levels with particular interest in free schools and open education.

PETER HARATONIK - coordinator of the Artist-in-the-Schools Program at the Center for Understanding Media - educational coordinator of the Center's M.A. program in Media Studies - formerly a New York City school teacher and VISTA volunteer.

DAVE JONASSEN - doctoral candidate in Educational Media at Temple University, conducting dissertation in video - educational media consultant for Pilot V, an educational television project for migrant children, based in Newfield, New Jersey.

JIM KEARNEY - now working for a film distribution company - previously been involved in teaching at Great Neck High School (1971-72) - has written for the journal "Communications on Alternatives" - free-lance consultant on education and media.

GERRY LAYBOURNE - festival Coordinator for the American Film Festival of the Educational Film Library Association - formerly, teacher at Concord Academy in Concord, Massachusetts, where she was involved in exploring the uses of video in the elementary school open classroom.

KIT LAYBOURNE - director of research and publications at the Center for Understanding Media - editor of DOING THE MEDIA (1972, C.U.M.) - has taught in the Philadelphia Public Schools and at Concord Academy in Massachusetts - graduate instructor of courses with the New School for Social Research and the Center for Understanding Media.

JOHN LE BARON - on the Faculty of Education at York University in Toronto - former director of the Children's Video Theater at the University of Massachusetts which involved elementary students whose tapes were cable-cast over local outlets - work has been reported on in numerous articles.

PHILLIP LOPATE - artist/writer-in-residence at P.S. 75 in New York City, working with Teachers and Writers Collaborative - author of a book of poetry, The Eyes Don't Always Want to Stay Open - at work on a book about education to be released by Doubleday.

BARBARA LUDLUM - staff member of the Center for Understanding Media since it began - production manager on the Center's book, DOING THE MEDIA - assistant to the producer in the Center's film series.

TERI MACK - the director of the Young Filmmakers Foundation Video Rivington Program - now a video specialist with the Teachers and Writers Collaborative and an artist-in-residence at P.S. 75,

New York - teacher of video for the Center for Understanding Media.

ELLEN MILES - producer at WTVT, an ETV station in Annandale, Virginia - worked with the Los Angeles Times, First Tuesday, NBC Reports and with David Brinkley - former teacher - has also done free-lance writing and reporting.

ANNE PAGE - member of the Communications Experience in Philadelphia for the last two years - currently thinking about moving to San Francisco or Seattle and working with kids there.

JOE PETNER - presently working on his doctorate in Teacher Education - a resource colleague in North Dakota with "Project Follow-Through," a federally funded program for children who are past the Headstart age groups - previously taught in Philadelphia elementary school.

PAUL RABIN - program manager of Warner Cable of eastern Massachusetts - worked in film and instructional television and taught in Chelmsford, Massachusetts before joining Warner two years ago.

SUSAN SHERWOOD - second grade teacher in Fort Yates, North Dakota, working with Joe Petner on Project Follow-Through.

JEFF STRICKLER - taught filmmaking to high school seniors in New Jersey and through a special program, for the U.S.I.A. in the Mid-East and South Asia - has also been a consultant to the American Film Institute - in the past year has been working with video and high school and elementary school students in New York through Open Channel.

ALDO TAMBELLINI - an independent film and video artist of international stature, began working with kids in Yonkers, New York in 1969, under program sponsored by the State's Division of Humanities in Albany - subsequently worked with children in Harlem from 1970 through 1972.

About This Issue

Support for the publication of this issue was provided by the Center for Understanding Media, 75 Horatio Street, New York 10014. Information about the Center's programs is available upon request.

Editors/Design: Peter Haratonik and Kit Laybourne
Production Coordinator: Barbara Ludlum
Photographic Services: Dan Edelman

We thank everyone who contributed time and energy in the preparation of this issue. While the following aren't listed as contributors, their help was important and we thank them: Rene Armayor, Marlene Arvan, Mark Bates, John Culkin, Milo Dalbey, Malcolm Frouman, Jack Herman, Beryl Korot, Bob Pinto, Ira Schneider, Mary Sheridan.

The opinions in this issue are those of the authors, and not necessarily those of the Center for Understanding Media.